Access to the competition area is not permitted to competitors before their turn. Once on the competition area, competitors must wear the clothing and protective equipment as outlined in the rules.

C. Execution of the event

Competition is held through elimination without repechage.

D. Confrontation

Krav-Maga Combat is a confrontation between two competitors.

Each confrontation includes 2 winning exchanges for the heats and 3 winning exchanges for the finals.

An exchange consists of two combat stages of 10 seconds maximum :

- During the first stage of 10 seconds maximum, one of both competitors is designated as the attacker while the other is designated as the defender ;
- During the second stage of 10 seconds maximum, competitors' roles are reversed.

At the end of the exchange, one of the competitors is declared to be the winner.

The stage consists of :

- first attack on one of the themes below, whether complemented or not by additional attacks chosen by the attacker ;
- defence techniques (protection and response) carried out by the defender.

Potential themes per stage to the choice of competitors are :

- attack with a weapon : knife or baton ;
- unarmed attacks : grabbing, strangulation, punching or kicking.

a) Execution of the confrontation

Competitors drop the weapons provided by the organizer at the edge of the surface (knives, batons).

Competitors are called by the central referee to the centre of the surface and greet each while standing at a distance of 1 meter on both sides of the centre.

The red competitor rotates 180° to turn his/her back on the blue competitor. The blue competitor heads towards the edge of the mat to retrieve a weapon of his choice. He/She can also decide to remain bare hands. Then he/she goes back to his original positioning.

The central referee stands at the edge of the mat to be visible by both competitors. At his/her signal (gesture and voice), the red competitor turns 180° to face the blue competitor who has 10 seconds to proceed with the attack.

Exchange is stopped :

- if one of the competitors has been neutralized ;
- if the attack is over ;
- if the majority of judges deem an attack as decisive by simultaneously crossing and raising the red and blue flags. The Head judge immediately alerts the central referee of the judges' decision ;
- and at the latest after 10 seconds.

The central referee breaks the competitors apart.

During the next stage, the roles are reversed as well as the positioning.

The blue competitor rotates 180° to turn his/her back on the red competitor. The red competitor heads towards the edge of the mat to retrieve a weapon of his choice. He/She can also decide to remain bare hands. Then he/she goes back to his original positioning.

The central referee stands at the edge of the mat to be visible by both competitors. At his/her signal (gesture and voice), the blue competitor turns 180° to face the red competitor who has 10 seconds to make the attack.

Exchange is stopped :

- if one of the competitors has been neutralized ;
- if the attack is over ;
- if the majority of judges deem an attack as decisive by simultaneously crossing and raising the red and blue flags. The Head judge immediately alerts the central referee of the judges' decision ;
- and at the latest after 10 seconds.

At the end of the first exchange, the competitors return to the centre of the competition area. The central judge requests the decision by whistling twice. All flags must be lifted simultaneously. The decision is in favour of either the competitor with the red belt or the blue belt. A draw is not possible. The competitor with the majority of flags is declared the winner of the exchange.

The central referee identifies the winner of the exchange by announcing the judges' results and by lowering his/her arm at 45° towards the winner.

Example with 3 judges :

"2, Blue; 1, Red > Winner of the exchange: blue competitor"

To lower the flags, the central judge whistles after the announcement of the result by the central referee.

The next exchanges will be held with the same protocol.

At the end of the confrontation, the competitors remove their helmet. The competitor having won a greater number of exchanges is declared the winner by the central referee. The central referee identifies the winner of the confrontation by raising his/her arm at 45° towards the winner and announces:

For example : "Winner of the fight, Blue competitor"

After the decision, the competitors bow to each other and to the referee panel and leave the competition area.

The competitors have ten minutes of recovery between each round.

b) Prohibited techniques and behaviours

Forbidden techniques include :

- Punching, kicking, as well as elbow and knee strikes on an opponent on the ground ;
- Headbutts ;
- Blows aimed at the genitals ;
- Blows aimed at the spine, the neck and the back of the head ;
- Blows aimed at the throat ;
- Direct knee strikes at the opponent's head ;
- Finger or toe locks and twists ;
- Uncontrolled neck twists ;
- Uncontrolled ankle twists ;
- Spinal locks ;
- Projections with joint locks in standing position ;
- Projections and intentional thrusts to drop the opponent on the neck or head ;
- Slams in submission defence by bringing the opponent above the waist level ;
- Backward falls from the standing position with the opponent behind.

Forbidden behaviours include :

- Grasping the artery trachea with fingers ;
- Inserting fingers in the opponent's nose, eyes, mouth or wound ;
- Clawing or pinching intentionally ;
- Holding or pulling hair ;
- Grabbing the opponent's clothes ;
- Seizing or putting your fingers in the opponent's ear ;
- Tickling the opponent ;
- Biting the opponent ;
- Spitting in the opponent's face or insulting him/her ;
- Challenging the referee's decisions, whether orally or gesturally.

Aggressive and deliberately dangerous behaviours that may affect the physical integrity of the opponent are prohibited.

c) Bowing and Waiting position

Bowing: with feet apart and parallel, the bust is inclined without being obtrusive, arms are down the side of the body.

Waiting position: with feet apart and parallel, both arms are crossed behind the back.

d) Uniform and equipment

Competitors must wear a Krav-Maga uniform :

- black trousers ;
- black-only tee-shirt ;
- barefoot.

The use of a bandage or support must be authorised by the competition physician.

e) Protections

Each competitor must wear the following personal protections :

- a mouth guard ;
- mittens with open palms ;
- a groin protector ;
- shin and feet protectors ;
- a helmet to protect the chin and the top of the scalp, a protector for the face (eyes) ;
- a plastron to protect the trunk and costal angles (only for juniors, women and veterans).

The helmet and the plastron are made available by the organiser.

The central referee checks all equipment are present before bowing.

f) Weapons

Foam weapons, batons and knife are provided by the organiser. They are placed at the edge of the mat and available to competitors before the start of the confrontation.

E. Judging criteria

Competitors must demonstrate their effectiveness to defend themselves against one or more clear attacks.

Judges value in the following order :

- effectiveness of the defender's protection: the defender was not touched on vital areas (blocking, dodging attacks or counters) ;
- effectiveness of the responses: neutralising the attacker (disabling, immobilization ...).

Judges can deem an attack as decisive with regard to its force, the weapon used and the affected area: powerful strike with the baton to the head, repeated stabbing to the liver, etc.

F. Warnings, penalties and disqualifications

The central referee may give out warnings, penalties, disqualifications and "out-of-combats".

A warning for forbidden techniques, dangerous strikes or unsuitable behaviour may be decided by the central referee with discontinuation of the exchange. A second warning leads to the loss of the current exchange. A third warning leads to the loss of the fight.

A competitor performing a prohibited technique or a prohibited voluntary blow may be automatically disqualified by the central referee.

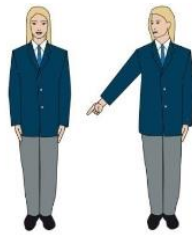

A voluntary exit from the competition area leads to the loss of the exchange.

Voluntary exit happens when a competitor is entirely outside of the competition area and no exchange has been performed.

Leaving the competition area during an exchange while remaining in the 1-metre safety band do not lead to discontinuation of the exchange nor to a sanction.

G. Gestures of the central referee and judges' signals

Welcoming of competitors	 The referee introduces "Blue" and "Red"
Bowing of competitors	 The referee says "Greet"
Warning for techniques or prohibited strikes	 The referee points his index finger towards the abdomen of the offender and says "Warning to Blue" or "Warning to Red" while indicating the forbidden technique or behaviour.

Disqualification	 The referee points his/her index finger towards the offender's face, and says "Blue disqualification" or "Red disqualification" Then, the referee announces the victory of the opponent "Winner Blue" or "Winner Red".
Identifying the winner of the exchange by the judges

D. Execution of the event

Competition is held through direct elimination without repechage.

E. Technical demonstration

The Krav-Maga competition is a team confrontation. Team competitors remain the same throughout the competition, no replacement is allowed.

Each duo proposes and demonstrates a free interpretation of situations.

Teams may present the same technical demonstration or they may present a different technical demonstration for each lap.

a) Duration of the technical demonstration

For all categories, the duration of the technical demonstration is 1 minute and 30 seconds (1'30"). Ten seconds before the end of the given time, a gong will alert the team. A second gong will mark the end of the technical demonstration. The team will be able to finish the sequence begun.

b) Execution of the technical demonstration

Technical demonstration may include:

For the attacker :

- Impacts from the upper limbs (open hands or closed fists) ;
- Impacts from lower limbs ;
- Grabbing ;
- Pushing ;
- Traction ;
- Encirclement ;
- Strangulation ;
- Bringing to the ground ;
- Projection ;
- Immobilisation on the ground ;
- Threatening with baton ;
- Threatening with knife ;
- Attack with baton ;
- Attack with knife.

For the defender :

The defence and responses should be many, varied and pragmatic as Krav-Maga prescribes.

During the technical demonstration, team members can be the "attacker" or "defender" on their own initiative without an imposed order, regardless of the gender category.

The movements will be free and the positioning vis-à-vis one's partner during the demonstration will be as well (front, side or behind).

The duo will be allowed to freely present a different technical demonstration or the same technical demonstration until and including in the finals.

During the registration verification at each round, each team captain will present himself/herself at the official table. The team which does not present itself at the call will be disqualified.

At each round two teams will present their technical demonstration in a confrontation.

At the start of each round, at the call of the team number and names of each duo, the two teams shall present themselves in front of the central judge.

The two competitors (duo) of a team will wear a red belt, and the members of the other team a blue belt. They should align themselves with the perimeter of the competition area, in front of the Judge.

After bowing to the central judge, the duo wearing the blue belt leaves the competition area and waits for their turn: the duo wearing the red belt enters the competition area and may start after another bow to the referee panel.

During the technical demonstration of the team, the two competitors must begin their performance before the central judge :

- If the first team uses weapons during the technical demonstration, it must leave the weapons used in the corners of the fighting area or wear them, and then begin the performance. The timer is started at the start of the performance. At the end of the performance, the team collects its weapons, leaves the area and waits for the demonstration of the other team to be completed.
- If the second team uses weapons during the technical demonstration, it must leave the weapons used in the corners of the fighting area or wear them, and then begin the performance. The timer is started once more. At the end of the performance, the team collects its weapons and both teams return to the competition area and wait for the decision of the referee panel.

When the two technical demonstrations are finished, both teams remain side by side before the central judge in the competition area. The central judge requests the decision by whistling twice. All flags must be lifted simultaneously.

To lower the flags, the central judge whistles once more.

The decision is in favour of either the team with the red belt or the blue belt. A draw is not possible. The team receiving the majority of flags is declared the winner.

After the decision, the competitors bow to each other and to the referee panel and leave the competition area. The team have at least five minutes of recovery between each round.

During the competition of their students, professors must adopt a dignified attitude respectful of officials, referees and competitors at all times. Coaching is not allowed.

c) Bowing and Waiting position

Bowing: with feet apart and parallel, the bust is inclined without being obtrusive, arms are down the side of the body.

Waiting position : with feet apart and parallel, both arms are crossed behind the back.

d) Uniform

Competitors must wear a Krav-Maga uniform :

- black trousers ;
- black-only tee-shirt ;
- red or blue belt (provided by the organiser) ;
- barefoot.

The team (duo) must have identical uniforms ;

In the two competing teams, one team must wear the red belt and the other the blue belt. These belts must measure about 5cm in width and be long enough to leave 15cm of slack on either side of the knot (provided by the competition organisers). Hair clips and hairpins must be discrete.

Wearing any other clothing or equipment is not allowed.

The use of a bandage or support must be authorised by the competition physician.

When teams or competitors present themselves in the competition area with a non-conforming uniform, there is not an immediate disqualification but one minute is given to remedy the issue.

e) Use of weapons

The technical demonstration includes situations with and without the use of weapons.

Technical demonstration of each team must include at least once the use of a baton and a knife.

A team may present one or a series of sequences with a weapon both for the defender and the attacker.

Only the weapons provided and given out by the organiser are authorised.

These weapons will necessarily be made of rubber and sponge. The weapons used during the technical demonstration must be either :

- Placed on one or multiple corners in the fighting area
- Carried by the competitors

For all categories, the baton and the knife must be used. Each team (red and blue) has 2 batons and 2 knives at their disposal.

F. Judging criteria

The team technical demonstration must be executed with skills and must demonstrate knowledge of the Krav-Maga principles.

This technical demonstration is not based on an aesthetic appreciation but rather on the values and fundamental principles of Krav-Maga, including efficiency, pragmatism, simplicity and speed.

To score the team performance, the judges shall keep the following criteria in mind:

- realism of the technical demonstration ;
- originality of the technical demonstration ;
- Variety and technical difficulty both in defence and in attack/threat ;
- Attitude ;
- Mastering of the technique, which implies a control over movements and safety ;
- Determination, concentration and a fighting spirit ;
- Proportional responses.

The two team partners are evaluated irrespective of their roles defined in the choice of their presentation (attacker or defender).

During the technical demonstration of the team, the two competitors must begin their performance before the central judge.

Team members must prove their skills in all aspects of the sequence execution.

G. Disqualifications and penalties

The team is disqualified by the central judge after consulting the head referee or a physician if the technical demonstration is discontinued following an injury, or if the safety of a competitor is compromised.

When a team is disqualified, the central judge raises the relevant flag (red or blue) and crosses and uncrosses the flags. After demonstration of the two teams during the same round, the non-disqualified team is declared the winner.

During the heats and semi-finals, both teams can be disqualified within the same round.

During the finals, the referee panel is responsible for making a decision and determining the final grading.

H. Gestures and signals of the judges

Identifying the winning team

- Black shoes

For the finals in each category, the referee team is made up of five judges, one scorer and one announcer.

- With 5 judges : The central judge will be seated at the edge of the competition area, facing the competitors. The other two judges will sit at each corner of the mat. The five judges will each have a blue and a red flag.
